

«Many States today still retain the death penalty in their penal laws. This is a practice that has been there since time immemorial as a manifestation of the Law of Moses, which incorporated a retributive approach that was characterised as an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. Unquestionably today, capital punishment is viewed by many societies and communities, States, civil society, international organizations and non-governmental organizations, to name a few, as a practice that does not quite reflect contemporary advances and realities.»
